

We celebrated Robert's birthday a few months ago. I wrote an obit and said that when we tried different restaurants in Philadelphia

we just met. We had in the same good papers a few months ago.

our 12 year report ready

It's been almost 10 years since I met Robert at one of Penn law's orientation events. I didn't expect much of law school, let alone meeting one of my best friends ever. Having heard all the horrors of first year law school, I expected to shut my door and study the whole first semester. Yet it was Robert who drew me out. I remember that on every Monday, the Asian Law School Group would have restaurant night. Typically it would be just me, Robert and John or David, the organizers of the event. On other nights, we would go to the food trucks or we would take turns cooking. It was those times over meals that I got to know Robert and discovered what a wonderful, smart and compassionate person he was. He was just a great conversationalist; engaging, witty, insightful and honest. We would continue our meals and our discussions as roommates. He told me about his desire to learn Chinese, wanting to meet someone special and to help people. There were so many people in law school who he took under his wings and have succeeded because of him or have been influenced by Robert. I feel like I'm one of those individuals. I came away from those conversations with a better understanding of myself, it was because of him that I am more involved in community activities and charities. I'm sure he's done the same for each and everyone of us here in this room. We'll miss Robert and will think of him always.

FEW,
Goodbye miss you.
